

From Canyonlands Field Institute

by Rebecca Martin

Canyonlands Field Institute (CFI), in Moab, has a number of 1994 course offerings specifically designed for professional guides. These include a variety of Safety and Medical certification courses, different levels of River Rescue training and Multi-Agency Guide Training options in addition to our regularly scheduled courses covering topics pertinent to programs on the Colorado Plateau. CFI is currently placing an emphasis on training options designed to reach "influencers," e.g., professional guides, trainers, and educational personnel, who are in positions to reach the increasing numbers of visitors who are visiting the Colorado Plateau. To help make this training available, scholarships are being offered for most guide training courses.

Coming up are, among other options, a Wilderness EMT course at Professor Valley Field Camp in March, the newly emerging Colorado Plateau Guide Institute's Field School in April and an Endangered Fish Recovery Workshop in May. For further information on CFI's Guide Training Courses, please contact: CFI, Attn: Rebecca Martin, Box 68, Moab, UT 84532. 1-800-860-5262 or FAX: (801) 259-2335.

Professional Guide Training Options for the 1994 Season

by Rebecca Martin

Some of you will have heard that we intended to publicize Guide Training Options for the coming season in this first issue of The Confluence. Well we received so many options, they weren't even manageable using a chart. (This is good!) Below, then, is the logical "Plan B": a listing of training source contacts where you may call/write to get specific information. Sorry you have to do further footwork, but believe me, there's a lot of great stuff out there in the offering! Call them!
